The actor, 41, stars in the NBC comedy* Truth Be Told, *premiering Oct. 16

Your character often says the wrong thing. That happen to you?
All the time. My wife [Catriona McGinn] will look at me, shake her head, and I'll realize, "Oops!"

What's life like at home with four children?
Kids are crazy. I'm constantly busy. But that's the beauty of having a family. It's blissful chaos.

Do they watch Saved by the Bell reruns?
My two older kids binge watch. And I still have the Bayside High jacket Zack [Morris] wore. It's framed!

Not Again

On Oct. 1, after a madman killed nine victims at Umpqua Community College in Roseburg, Ore., we covered every horrible development of the story on people.com, and we began planning our coverage of the massacre for this issue of the magazine. It's so heartbreaking and infuriating to think how many times over the years we've done exactly this—reaching out to victims' families and survivors of mass shootings, gathering details about the fallen. As President Obama said, our responses to these incidents—from politicians, from the media, from nearly everyone—have become "routine."

We all ask ourselves the same questions: How could it happen again? What are we doing about gun violence in America? There are no easy answers, of course. Some argue for stricter gun laws, others say we should focus on mental health issues, some point to a culture that celebrates violence. But this much we know: As a country we clearly aren't doing enough, and our elected officials' conversations about solutions usually end in political spin. In this issue we pay tribute to the nine Oregon victims, as well as 22 other men, women and children who've lost their lives in mass shootings—incidents where a murderer has opened fire on a crowd—in the U.S. during the past 12 months. That definition of "mass shooting" is pretty narrow; the number of victims skyrockets if you count other types of multiple shootings like domestic violence and murder-suicides. So far this year, according to the Gun Violence Archive, there have been 10,006 gun-related deaths in the United States, and the CDC says firearm injuries and deaths are "a significant public health problem." I think about mass shootings when I'm on a train, and when the lights go down in a movie theater, and when I see children in a classroom." We need to know that our representatives in Washington, D.C., are looking for solutions and not giving up, and they need to know if we agree or disagree with their strategies, so we've provided phone numbers for all 535 voting members of the House and Senate on page 58. Let's make sure they know that from now on, "routine" responses just won't cut it.

SANDRA'S HAPPY NEW LIFE

Los Angeles, Oct. 1

Sandra Bullock shares a cozy moment with her boyfriend Bryan Randall. The Oscar winner, 51, and the model-photographer, 49, have been "happily dating" since mid-June, says a source, though they're not living together or engaged. "They started dating after Bryan photographed [Bullock's son] Louis for his graduation picture," adds the source, and Randall, who has a daughter, "respects that her main priority is Louis; he's a parent himself. There's no co-parenting involved." There has been no comment regarding rumors that Bullock has adopted again.

SHONDA RHIMES
HOW I LOST 117 LBS.

BY PATRICK GOMEZ

THE CHARACTERS she's created on her hit dramas Grey's Anatomy and Scandal save plenty of lives, one way or another. So last year producer powerhouse Shonda Rhimes decided it was time for her to save a life. In her memoir Year of Yes, to be published next month, Rhimes, 45, writes about moving in a more positive direction on all kinds of fronts, including facing the fact that she needed to lose weight. "I want to live a long life for myself and for my children. I want to feel good," she writes. "And once I say that, I have to buckle down and do the work and not complain and accept that the work is going to be hard. Because that is what it is. Work. Hard. Work. . . . If I say yes, the life I save will be my own." She ate smaller portions, exercised and lost 117 lbs.—and it was every bit as hard as she'd anticipated.

Photographs by JAMES WHITE

'I HAVE TO BUCKLE DOWN . . . AND NOT COMPLAIN AND ACCEPT THE WORK IS GOING TO BE HARD . . . [BECAUSE] IF I SAY YES, THE LIFE I SAVE WILL BE MY OWN'
—SHONDA RHIMES

"I hated it," Rhimes told Extra. "I'm like, 'Where's my cake?' " Being the head of her own production company, ShondaLand, and single mom to three daughters (she adopted Harper and Emerson in 2002 and 2012, respectively, and welcomed Beckett via surrogate in 2013) means she had to get creative when it came to finding time for workouts. "I end up living at the studio, so I wanted there to be a treadmill in my office," she told People last fall. "I spend a lot of time sitting on my butt writing, so when I'm watching [footage], I want to be able to take a walk."

Losing the weight was well worth it, Rhimes says in her book, as were all the other challenges she spent 12 months saying yes to: public speaking engagements, more playtime, tough conversations. She calls her Year of Yes "a little insane, a lot terrifying and sometimes wildly embarrassing," but also "one of the most amazing decisions I have ever made."

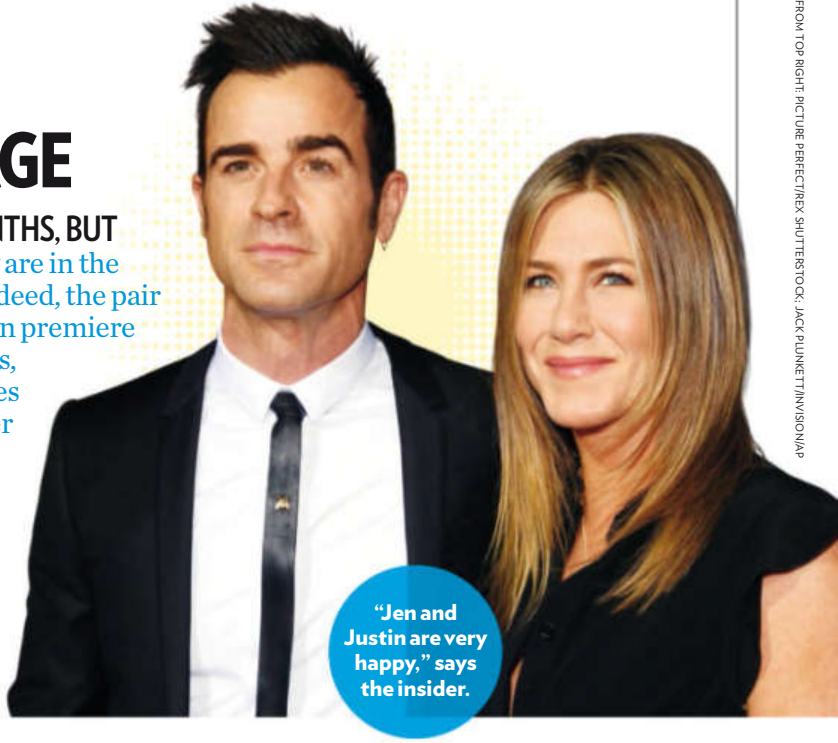

Before her Year of Yes, "my life had . . . drained of color and excitement," Rhimes writes.

INSIDE THEIR 'FANTASTIC' MARRIAGE

THEY'VE BEEN BACK TO WORK FOR TWO MONTHS, BUT Aniston, 46, and Theroux, 44, "still act like they are in the honeymoon phase," says an Aniston insider. Indeed, the pair "were very close and cuddly" at the Oct. 3 season premiere of his HBO drama The Leftovers in Austin, Texas, where Aniston playfully blew her husband kisses on the red carpet, says an onlooker. Shortly after their Aug. 5 nuptials, Theroux returned to his busy filming schedule in Austin. "It's horrible being apart from your spouse," he told Extra of doing long-distance, but he and Aniston "make it work" thanks to visits and FaceTime. As for their newlywed life? "Something really does shift in a wonderful way, and it refocuses things," the actor told GMA. "It's fantastic."

NEARLY TWO YEARS AFTER HIS DEATH IN A TRAGIC car crash, Paul Walker's daughter Meadow, 16, is carrying on her father's charitable legacy—and heading to court. On Sept. 28 she filed a wrongful-death lawsuit against Porsche, claiming the actor would still be alive if the company had installed proper safety features in the car. "She's a teenage girl who is still dealing with the tragic loss of her father," her lawyer Jeff Milam tells People. Last month she launched the Paul Walker Foundation, which provides scholarships to students interested in ocean conservation. Said Meadow when announcing the organization: "I can't think of a better way to celebrate my father than to continue his legacy of helping others."

The actress, 35, is speaking out about the worldwide effort to eradicate polio

Why I Care
PERSONAL STORIES ABOUT GIVING BACK

Reading the facts about polio is what solidified my involvement as a spokesperson for Rotary's "This Close" campaign. Polio sounds so ancient, but as recently as the 1980s there were 350,000 cases a year worldwide. That's a very, very shocking number to hear. It has steadily declined as a result of people talking about it and making these vaccines readily available to the people who need them. Polio is a viral disease. It mostly attacks children under the age of 5, and it robs them of their mobility. I have two children under the age of 5, and their mobility is currently their most prized possession. I couldn't imagine if they didn't have the ability to scoot around and jump off things. And I don't want any mother to have to think, "What if my kid has polio?" Knowing that there's no cure, you think, "Okay, well, how do we prevent it?" In 2015 there were fewer than 50 cases reported, so eradicating the disease is such an accomplishable goal! What's so great about Rotary's campaign is that they're commenting on how close we are—that's why it's called "This Close." I'd love to get in the lab and give some vaccines to kids, of course, but that's not my expertise. So I'm raising awareness and being optimistic about polio's end. —REPORTED BY GABRIELLE OLYA

The Bratayley family—famous for their daily video blog—is reeling from the loss of their son Caleb

For the past five years, a popular YouTube family known as the Bratayleys has entertained their more than 1 billion viewers with the antics of their three children, Caleb, 13, Annie, 10, and Hayley, 7. But on Oct. 2, Katie, the family's matriarch, had some tragic news to share with their legions of fans: "Yesterday at 7:08 p.m. Caleb Logan Bratayley passed away," she wrote on Instagram. "This has come as a shock to all of us. Words cannot describe how much we will miss him. His incredibly funny, loving and wonderful spirit made us all fall in love with him as a YouTuber, friend, brother and son."

While his mom said he passed away from "natural causes," Bruce Goldfarb, a spokesman for the Maryland State Medical Examiner Office, says that they are still investigating the cause of death. Meanwhile Lt. Ryan Frashure, the Anne Arundel County Police Department's director of media relations, tells People they were called to the scene for a "medical emergency" around 7 p.m. on Oct. 1. "Nothing appeared to be criminal, nothing was suspicious and there was no foul play," Frashure said. "There is no investigation on our end because there is nothing criminal or suspicious."

Although the kids were the stars of the countless YouTube videos, their parents, Katie and Billy, have publicly stressed that they are the ones who manage the channel and oversee the tweens' social media presence. (In fact, they use the handle of "The Bratayleys"—and decline to say where, exactly, in Maryland they live—to help preserve some semblance of privacy despite their very public postings.) "This is awful," neighbor Deborah Woodcock tells People. "I know Caleb was a big baseball player, and he loved his dogs."

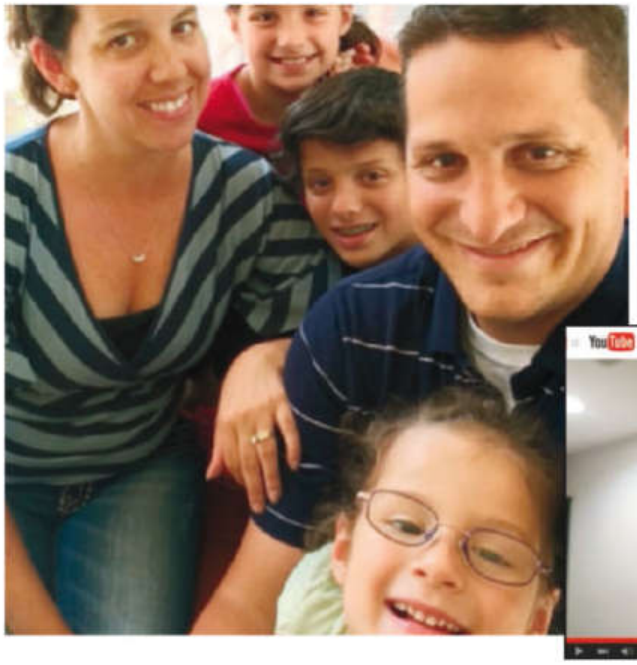

Caleb gained a worldwide fan base on YouTube.

> 'Words cannot describe how much we will miss him'
> —THE BRATAYLEY FAMILY

This isn't the first time that the Bratayleys have addressed tragedy in their videos. Back in October 2013, their cousin, David Cooper, committed suicide at the age of 10. He had previously appeared in the Bratayleys' videos and vacationed with them.

On Oct. 3, one day after announcing Caleb's death on social media, the family released a final video featuring the teen, which had been filmed on Sept. 30. In the clip, he is seen answering a question about what he would ask his "future self." "Is Taco Bell still around?" he jokes, before asking if there were "any new sports" in the future.

The video cut out shortly after Caleb's answer, followed by a heartfelt message from the family: "He will never get to meet his future self. None of us will and we are very sad because he would have been great."

The Bratayleys' videos covered everything from their breakfasts to their after-school activities; Caleb's final post (below).

Jean Smart, Patrick Wilson, Ted Danson, Jesse Plemons and Kirsten Dunst.

No. 1 Fargo

Welcome back to the land of 10,000 murder sprees. You betcha you'll want to stay

TV DRAMA Fargo's first season was no mere reboot of the 1996 Coen brothers movie: It kept the bleak landscape and black comedy but created a whole new population of law-abiding souls, heartless criminals and dumb victims. Like a fall of snowflakes, Fargo from a distance appears uniform but up close is fascinatingly variegated. Season 2, moving back in time to 1979, involves a killing in a diner, a family drug gang run by the flintiest of Ma Barkers (Jean Smart) and a beautician (Kirsten Dunst) who makes a bad decision on an icy road. If at times Fargo drifts from the Coen brothers into David Lynch or Quentin Tarantino terrain, that's fine. Those filmmakers' best work is all about how violence, taken to an extreme, becomes absurd without losing its terror. (FX, Oct. 12, 10 p.m.)

The vision thing: Fassbender gets inside Jobs's head and reveals his soul.

No. 2 Steve Jobs

Michael Fassbender and Kate Winslet take a bite of the Apple

MOVIE DRAMA Apple cofounder Steve Jobs (Fassbender) was theatrical in life, so it's fitting that the movie version of his story unfolds as a three-act play. Director Danny Boyle and screenwriter Aaron Sorkin build the narrative around three product launches, in which we see Jobs soar as a genius but often fail as a human being. The script is blade-sharp and the direction kinetic. Fassbender is beguilingly complex, sympathetic even at his most feral, and a fiery Winslet gets to the heart of matters as Apple's marketing chief and conscience Joanna Hoffman. Together they're flat-out ferocious. (Oct. 9, R)

Gina Rodriguez: a joyful performance no matter what the trauma.

No. 3 Jane the Virgin

TV COMEDY In the chaotic telenovela plot of Jane the Virgin, everyone clings tight to their motive, dream, principle or idée fixe: These are the lifesavers that keep them afloat in this crazy, up-and-down ocean of a show. At the start of season 2, for instance, Jane (Gina Rodriguez) is still in the hospital, calculating the feeding schedule for her just-delivered baby, when a fresh crisis announces itself. She's beside herself, of course, but she never stops keeping track of that feeding schedule. She's intrepid and just as adorable as when we first met her. Maybe more. (CW, Oct. 12, 9 p.m.)

No. 4 Selena Gomez, Revival

MUSIC POP

She's just 23, but Gomez has already weathered a stint in rehab, body shaming and a breakup with Justin Bieber. Little wonder her latest LP sounds like it comes from a woman who's older than her years. The singer embraces her lower register and preaches about empowerment in the upbeat "Kill Em with Kindness" and "Rise." And though she got her start as a Disney starlet, Gomez pushes her sexy image with songs such as "Me & the Rhythm" and "Hands to Myself." Expect that last one to get stuck in your head indefinitely.

You Could Receive Benefits from a Class Action Settlement.

This Court-Authorized Notice describes your rights and gives information about the proposed Settlement. This notice is only a summary. Details of the Settlement are available at www.DepartmentStoreTCPAsettlement.com or by writing to or calling the Claims Administrator at the address or toll-free number below.

WHAT IS THIS LAWSUIT ABOUT? In the lawsuit entitled Hashw v. Department Stores National Bank, and FDS Bank, U.S.D.C., District of Minnesota, Case No. 0:13-cv-00727-RHK-BRT, plaintiff Ameer A. Hashw ("Plaintiff"), for himself and on behalf of a supposed class of people, alleges that Department Stores National Bank and FDS Bank (together, "Defendants") violated the Telephone Consumer Protection Act, 47 U.S.C. § 227, et seq. (the "TCPA"), by using an automatic telephone dialing system and/or an artificial or prerecorded voice to place phone calls to cell phones between September 3, 2009 and July 22, 2015, where the calls were placed for debt collection purposes in connection with a Macy's and/or Bloomingdale's credit card account and made without the prior express consent of the persons called. People who received such calls are "Settlement Class Members." Defendants deny Plaintiff's allegations; however, in order to avoid the expense, inconvenience and distraction of continued litigation, the Defendants have agreed to the Settlement described herein. The Court has not ruled on the merits of Plaintiff's claims or Defendants' defenses.

WHAT DOES THE SETTLEMENT PROVIDE? Defendants have agreed to pay $12,500,000 into a fund (the "Fund") in full and complete settlement and release of all claims of Plaintiff and the Settlement Class Members, as described in the Settlement Agreement. The Fund will be divided pro rata among Settlement Class Members who send in a valid claim form, after attorneys' fees and costs, a service award to Plaintiff and other expenses have been deducted. Payments to Settlement Class Members will not exceed $750, and the precise amount depends on the number of valid claim forms that Settlement Class Members send in. Class Counsel will ask the Court to approve an award of up to one-third of the Fund for attorneys' fees and expenses and $27,500 to Plaintiff for his service as Class Representative. If there are any uncashed checks, that money will be redistributed to Settlement Class Members or be distributed cy pres to charity.

HOW DO YOU MAKE A CLAIM? In order to receive a payment from the Fund, you must submit a signed and completed Claim Form by mail to the Claims Administrator or online at the website www.DepartmentStoreTCPAsettlement.com no later than December 29, 2015.

OTHER OPTIONS. Class Members who do not want to be legally bound by the Settlement may opt-out of the Settlement by sending a request for exclusion that (a) is signed by the Class Member; (b) includes the Class Member's full name, address and phone number; and (c) includes the following statement: "I/we request to be excluded from the Settlement in the Hashw action" to the Claims Administrator at: Department Store TCPA Settlement, c/o Heffler Claims Group, P.O. Box 290, Philadelphia, PA 19105 no later than December 14, 2015. The Court will exclude from the class any member who requests exclusion. Class Members who exclude themselves from the Settlement will not receive any money from the Settlement. Class Members that do not exclude themselves from the Settlement will be bound by any judgment entered as to the class. Class Members that do not opt-out may object to the Settlement by explaining the objection to the Settlement in writing. Objections must be in writing and be mailed to both Class Counsel and defense counsel and filed with the Court no later than December 14, 2015. Objectors whose objections are rejected will be bound by the Settlement. Class Members may enter an appearance through an attorney if they so desire, but don't have to do so. Class Members that do nothing will not receive any benefits from the Settlement, but will nevertheless be bound by any judgment approving the Settlement and will give up any right to sue either one of the Defendants (or either of their agents or affiliates) for any known or unknown claims relating to calls made to the Class Member's cellular telephone number, including alleged violations of the TCPA.

FINAL APPROVAL HEARING. The Court will hold a hearing in this case to consider whether to approve the Settlement on February 26, 2016, at 9:00 a.m., United States District Court, Federal Building 772, 316 North Robert Street, Courtroom 7A, St. Paul, MN 55101.

THIS NOTICE IS ONLY A SUMMARY. Zombies, get ready to face the human apocalypse!

It's open season on the undead.

TV DRAMA Talk about a pit of despair! Picking back up after the shot heard round Alexandria, the latest season of The Walking Dead opens with another explosive, expansive set piece, featuring the writhing undead piled in a quarry. But the issue plaguing Rick Grimes (Andrew Lincoln) and his crew of survivors is less about keeping reanimated corpses out than dealing with those they've let in. That would be a new group of human settlers they must share space with. Getting to know your neighbors is never easy—especially while battling those pesky zombies. (AMC, Oct. 11, 9 p.m.)

Adriana Trigiani channels old Hollywood, Amy Robach details her cancer battle, and Rainbow Rowell makes magic EDITED BY KIM HUBBARD

Rainbow Rowell Carry On

NOVEL Based on the fake Harry Potter-like series Rowell featured in Fangirl, her new book follows magician Simon Snow, who's destined by prophecy to fight the Insidious Humdrum. But Simon can't control his magic, much less take on a mysterious supervillain. Full of heart and humor, this fantastical tale is a worthy addition to the wizarding-school genre.

Amy Robach Better

MEMOIR The Good Morning America host's emotional book details her battle with breast cancer and how it affected her family, tested her strength and changed her life. She writes candidly of the toll the disease took, but ultimately this is an inspiring story of coming back from cancer and learning to cherish every moment.

BOOK OF THE WEEK

Adriana Trigiani All the Stars in the Heavens

NOVEL Reading Trigiani's latest is like settling in with a bag of popcorn and watching an old black-and-white movie. Befitting the style of the day, the tale—a fictionalized account of the real-life love affair between screen idols Loretta Young and Clark Gable—is full of romance, drama and snappy (sometimes sappy) dialogue. It's a thoroughly entertaining tale that brings Hollywood's golden age alive.

A gunman opens fire in a college classroom, killing 9. Amid the shock and grief, many are asking: What can be done about gun deaths in America?

TERROR AND GRIEF
From left: A vigil in Roseburg on Oct. 1; Mercer in an undated photo; the college evacuation on Oct. 1; mourners place flowers at a memorial on Oct. 3.

At 10:30 a.m. the students in Writing 122 were deep into discussing the moral obligation to help the hungry when loud bangs rattled the room. Was it fireworks? Gunshots? To Kim Dietz it sounded like trouble, and she knew that her 19-year-old daughter Shannon was in a classroom nearby. So Dietz—a former park ranger who was back in school at age 59 to learn new skills—stepped outside classroom 16 to look around. "Seconds later, you hear this pop, pop, pop," says her friend and classmate Sharon Kirkham. When Dietz reappeared, there were holes in her elbow, her chest and the palm of her left hand. "I saw Kimmy go out the door healthy and breathing," says Kirkham. A few heartbeats later, "she came back in and fell through the doorway."

Kim Dietz died on the cool, cloudy morning of Oct. 1, one of nine victims killed by gunman Chris Harper Mercer at Umpqua Community College in Roseburg, Ore. The massacre, in which nine others were injured before Mercer turned the gun on himself, stunned the close-knit, largely blue-collar community of 22,000. It also shook the nation at large, especially after this year's previous mass shootings—of church members in Charleston, S.C., military personnel in Chattanooga and moviegoers in Lafayette, La., among others. In an impassioned speech hours after the shootings, President Obama demanded something be done to stop the senseless murders. "Our thoughts and prayers are not enough," he said. "We've become numb to this."

'I went home and hugged my family. There isn't always going to be a tomorrow'
—POLICE OFFICER ON THE SCENE

In Roseburg, residents struggled to believe something so horrific could happen in their rural hamlet nestled in the Umpqua River Valley. "It's a perfect small town," says Roseburg native Alek Skarlatos, the National Guardsman who was one of three Americans hailed as heroes for helping to thwart the recent attack on a train in France. "It's almost literally a Mayberry."

That idyllic setting shattered when Mercer arrived on campus armed with five pistols and a rifle. (Police later recovered another two pistols, four rifles and a shotgun—all legally obtained—at his apartment.) A 26-year-old loner who had washed out of the Army after five weeks and lived with his mother in nearby Winchester, Mercer was enrolled in Professor Larry Levine's writing class. But when he walked into classroom 15 that day, he had deadly intentions. Mercer ordered everyone to the center of the classroom and began firing. "He said, 'Do you have a religion? Because if you do, you are going to meet your maker,' " says Stephanie Salas, whose 18-year-old son Rand McGowan was shot in the hand. "Rand said he would shoot no matter what they said."

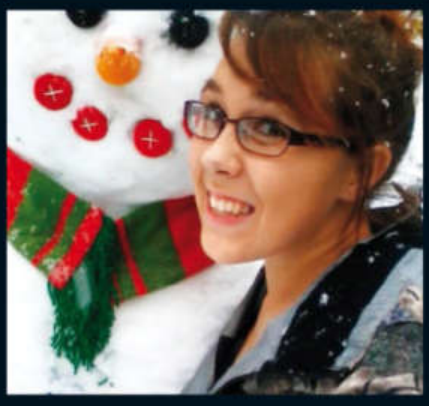

In the initial hail of gunfire through the class, Ana Boylan, 18, was hit in the back, a bullet rocketing through five vertebrae. She lay motionless, not responding as Mercer asked if she was alive, says her brother Korre. "He left my sister, assuming she was dead," he says. "She was an innocent young girl ready to take on the world, and he took that away from her. Her sense of security is shattered."

Chris Mintz, a single dad and an Army veteran enrolled at Umpqua to forge a new career, was shot seven times and lauded by some witnesses for trying to intercept Mercer. One bullet tore down his spine and lodged permanently in his hip, and doctors have said it will take years for him to relearn how to walk. "We're just so thankful he's

"She was such a bright young woman," says friend Jamie Ball of the aspiring pediatric nurse. Her sister Maria Leticia wrote, "I never got the chance to tell you how proud of you I was."

JASON JOHNSON, 33

"Jason was proud to be a Christian," his family said in a statement. The 33-year-old was also proud to have made the decision to return to school after time away. He was in his first week of classes when he was killed. "Jason had finally found his path," his family said. "He will be missed."

alive," says his aunt Wanda Kay Mintz.

Local law enforcement encountered a scene of unimaginable carnage when they arrived on campus. "They said it was the worst thing they had ever seen when they went into that classroom," says Skarlatos, whose brother-in-law was among the first responders at the school. "It was horrible. There was blood, brains and bone fragments everywhere." Adds a police officer on the scene: "I've never seen that type of panic before. You could look into these kids' eyes and see a fear that I've never seen. It's more than just a regular fear. It's a terror, where you can see that their lives are going to be changed from this moment. It will stick with me for the rest of my life."

Then, in a ritual that has played out at the sites of other mass shootings, family members waited at a nearby meeting site in desperate hope of seeing their loved ones alive. When Shan-

"It's all such a blur right now," says Umpqua associate professor Toni Clough. "Every one looks like they are shell-shocked. You always worry when you hear about shootings that it could happen on your campus. But no one really expects it." Above: Paramedics transport victims to the hospital. Right: A makeshift memorial.

QUINN COOPER, 18

The recent high school grad had just started college four days before the shootings. "Quinn was funny, sweet, compassionate and such a wonderful, loving person," his family said in a statement. "He always stood up for people. Our lives are shattered beyond repair."

LUCAS EIBEL, 18

One in a set of fraternal quadruplets, he was studying chemistry. "We have been trying to figure out how to tell everyone how amazing Lucas was, but that would take 18 years," said his family.

KIM DIETZ, 59

Raised in a small town in England, "she had the greatest stories," says Robert Stryk, who owns the vineyard where she worked. "She loved her garden. She was just so cool."

LARRY LEVINE, 67

The assistant professor of English grew up in Beverly Hills but was a seasoned outdoorsman who also worked as a fly-fishing guide. "He was the sweetest, most gentle, kind, thoughtful and creative person," his friend David Furman told The Oregonian. "My heart is broken." Another friend, Cookie Proval, told the newspaper, "He was a renaissance man."

TREVEN ANSPACH, 20

"He was a hard worker and a damn good basketball player," friend Jesse Milbrat says of Anspach, who worked with him at Roseburg Forest Products. "He deserves way better. I was with him the last day I was in Oregon before I left for the Army [in May] . The last thing he said to me was, 'Good luck and thanks for your service.' He was a great kid."

non Dietz got off the bus there, "there is no way to describe the relief I felt," says her father, Eric. But then Kirkham delivered the devastating news that his wife had died at the scene. "I went up to him and said, 'I did everything I possibly could to save Kim. I promise I did everything,'" recalls Kirkham, who had administered CPR on the classroom floor before paramedics arrived. "He looked like he was in shock."

Hoping Kirkham was somehow wrong, Eric resolved to stay put. Finally a police officer approached. "If you're waiting for someone to come on the next bus," he told Eric and Shannon, "there is no next bus."

For Dietz, as for the other families who lost loved ones, the pain is without measure. Eric and Kim moved to the Umpqua River Valley in 2008 to pursue their dream of running a winery. A nature lover, Kim doted on her daughter and the family's two Great Pyrenees dogs, and she spoke eagerly about her plans to train the dogs as therapy animals. Gifted with a green thumb, she could turn fallow poppy fields at the winery into lush gardens and adored the Oregon countryside—especially in the colorful autumn months—after previously living in urban California. "She loved the beauty here, the turning of the seasons," says Eric. Robert Stryk, who owns the winery where Dietz worked, is among the millions around the world who are stunned by the senseless loss. "You think you leave the city for a safe place," he says, "and then evil is brought to you."

REMEMBERING THE LOST

Marysville. Menasha. Charleston, Chattanooga and Lafayette. The attack at Umpqua Community College was the latest in a string of mass public shootings in the past 12 months. These are the faces of some of the men, women and children killed in the past year by gun violence.

OCT. 24, 2014 A SCHOOL CAFETERIA

Seven days after celebrating his election as homecoming prince at Marysville-Pilchuck High School, north of Seattle, freshman Jaylen Fryberg, 15, texted three friends and two cousins to meet him for lunch. He later walked into the cafeteria and shot each at point-blank range. Then he turned the gun on himself.

HAPPIER TIMES "He's about moving forward," says a close friend of Shelton's (with Lambert in 2012). "He has a positive outlook."

Blake Shelton HOW HE'S MOVING ON

THE COUNTRY STAR NAVIGATES LIFE AS A SINGLE MAN FOR THE FIRST TIME IN A DECADE—AND IS LOOKING BETTER THAN EVER

by Melody Chiu

Blake Shelton isn't usually one to hold back. But on Sept. 24 at a party celebrating his five No. 1 hits at Losers Bar and Grill in Nashville, he was, surprisingly, a man of few words. "I'm gonna make this so quick it's unbelievable," the singer said to a roomful of well-wishers. "Everything I say is going to end up in the tabloids. And it doesn't even matter what I say; it will."

Since announcing his split from fellow country singer Miranda Lambert on July 20, Shelton—famed for sharing candid and funny takes about his personal life on Twitter—has been under constant scrutiny. Fans were stunned that country's most celebrated couple were divorcing after four years of marriage, and rumors of the pair's troubles became grist for an overheated rumor mill. The most serious allegations were stories that made him sound like a character in a hard-luck country song: He is drinking too much and scaring loved ones, who are trying to force him into rehab. "He's trying to have a sense of humor about the rumors," says a close friend, who denies that Shelton has substance-abuse issues. "He was prepared for that kind of reaction and doesn't take it to heart."

While the end of his storied marriage may have left some initial bruises, his buddies say Shelton, 39, remains the same hunting-fishing-and-pickup-truck-loving good old boy who rules the country charts—albeit a wiser and more cautious one. Three months after finalizing his divorce from Lambert, the Voice coach is trying out life as one of Nashville's most eligible men. He's also shooting the ninth season of NBC's singing competition show in Los Angeles, finding release in the recording studio ("Wrote a song so important to me I can't believe it," he tweeted in August of writing a gospel tune with longtime

NEW FOCUS

"This is the most excited he's been about an album," says a source close to the star (in Nashville Sept. 23), who's releasing new music next year.

HIS LIFE NOW

"He's focused on his music and is invested in his health," says a pal of Shelton's. The country singer (right, with Gwen Stefani and Pharrell Williams) recently got a new truck, is releasing a greatest-hits album and has held on to his sense of humor. "Getting a little tongue action from my girl," he captioned this Aug. 14 selfie with his dog. And he's kept the drinking jokes coming, like when he warned fellow guests about his partying in the caption for this pic (left) of his hotel's minibar.

HER LIFE NOW

friends and cowriters Jon Randall and Jessi Alexander) and wearing out blacktop across the country promoting his compilation album Reloaded: 20 #1 Hits (out Oct. 23). "It's been a weird year," he told reporters at the iHeartRadio music festival in Las Vegas on Sept. 19. "But at least I got my songs coming out."

Despite his laid-back public image, work has always been therapy for Shelton, who devotes long hours to his music and The Voice. Since the split he has been resolutely upbeat, says his friend: "He's bounced back very quickly. Clearly he was upset during the breakup, but he's not someone to sit around and lick his wounds. He's not looking in the rearview mirror." On the Voice set "Blake is his typical prankster self," the friend continues. "He's enjoying his time with the coaches. They are a tight-knit group." When the singer does get a few days off, he flies to Tishomingo, Okla., where he still owns the 1,200-acre ranch he once shared with his ex. (Lambert, 31, owns another property nearby, plus businesses in town.) This month he went on an annual hunting trip and "has been chilling with his pals on his ranch," says the friend. "He's part of the community in Oklahoma. It helps keep things in perspective." Recently he was spotted in town picking up a new fridge and was still "the same old Blake," says local newspaper publisher Ray Lokey. "He hasn't changed his routine and is still very much a resident of the area."

Shelton is also learning to be a bachelor again—he took a guys' trip to Cancún, Mexico, in August. "Blake had a fun weekend and enjoyed his single life," says a source at the ME by Meliá resort, who added that Shelton "enjoyed the attention" from female fans. And though he was drinking and letting loose, multiple sources insist the star is not partying to excess. "What makes Blake so much fun is he's not afraid to be himself," says the friend. "That's his persona. He's the life of the party." Adds another Shelton source: "It takes a big personality to fill up that 6-ft.-4-in. frame, and it's all in fun. They shouldn't take his tweets so literally." The singer—who told People that he and Voice host and executive producer Carson Daly enjoy mixing Bloody Marys in their trailers during downtime on-set—also owns his penchant for taking a swig while performing. "When I get nervous, I tend to drink a little bit, okay?" he told the audience at the iHeartRadio show with a red Solo cup in hand. But responding to a Sept. 21 tweet that suggested a list of "nice rehabs" for him, Shelton deployed his trademark wit: "Nice ideas — 1. Kiss my ass. 2. Suck camel nuts," he wrote.

Shelton and Lambert—he the tall, charming cowboy and she the fiery Texas girl—were a Nashville institution that crumbled seemingly out of nowhere. Immediately after they announced their split, tabloid rumors of cheating sprang up. The couple, who signed a prenuptial agreement before their 2011 wedding, have dismissed stories of bad blood. "Our whole thing was, you know, we're just going to be cool about this," Shelton said recently on country radio's Bobby Bones Show about his relationship with Lambert, who's been on tour and is also working on a new album. "It is what it is. We're bud-

FRIENDLY EXES

Shelton and Lambert (in 2014) will cross paths publicly for the first time at the CMA Awards Nov. 4. "He still supports her," says the pal.

dies." Though some fans speculated the friendly tweets the exes exchanged after their divorce announcement were a charade ("@blakeshelton I knew it. . . . You WERE pregnant! This calls for a drink!" Lambert wrote four days after the news broke), insiders say it's not just for show. "Blake has always respected Miranda, and they have been courteous and supported each other," says the Shelton pal. "He supports her still. That's the way their relationship is."

Over the summer Shelton has also focused on getting into shape. Asked how he's been shedding the pounds on America's Morning Show, the star joked he's been on a "divorce diet" before explaining, "The whole stress of getting through all of that is just weird." According to the singer, he's no longer "eating as many fried pickles and stuff" and has settled into an exercise routine that is very much his style: mowing the lawn. "In the middle of processing chaos with my personal life, I walked out and I was thinking, 'What's going on in my life?' " he joked to CMT. "I mean, 'This is so crazy . . . but what the hell is going on with my yard? It's like, are you kidding me? It's, like, 3 ft. tall out here! What happened?' " According to the Shelton friend, the singer's 20-lb. weight loss also comes down to the fact that he has more time for himself. "There's been a silver lining for Blake," says the friend. "He's focused on taking care of himself. He's less stressed now that he's not working his schedule around someone else."

For now he plans to keep it that way. Multiple sources deny reports of a new romance with fellow Voice coach Gwen Stefani. "They're nothing more than friends," says Shelton's friend of his relationship with the No Doubt singer, who announced her separation from rocker Gavin Rossdale after nearly 13 years of marriage in August. Romance isn't something Shelton is ready for. "Blake has accepted the divorce, but he is not dating," says the friend. "He's having fun and taking time for himself." Adds the Shelton source: "He just got divorced, so he's not thinking about that." The toughest part—"realizing that he and Miranda weren't forever," says the pal—is behind him, and Shelton is now going about rebuilding his life without Lambert by his side. "I'm in a good place. I wasn't, but I am now," he told CMT. "It's amazing how quickly life can turn around for you. I've had some pretty cool things in recent times that have happened, and I'm loving it." —With additional reporting by Danielle Anderson, Pernilla Cedenheim, Mark Gray and Kay West

Long Live the Queen

WITH A JUICY NEW ROLE DRAWING ON HER HORROR-MOVIE PAST, THE SCREAM QUEENS STAR IS EXPERIENCING A CAREER RESURGENCE

BY JOHNNY DODD

Kicking back at her kitchen table, sipping a cup of coffee with her white Lab asleep at her feet, Jamie Lee Curtis nearly jumps out of her chair when the front doorbell rings. "Did you see that?" she asks with a laugh. "Did you see what I did? I scare so easily. Isn't that a lovely bit of irony?"

Indeed it is. And it's only fitting that Curtis, who got her first big break starring in 1978's Halloween, is back in the spotlight playing a dictatorial college dean in FOX's Scream Queens, a darkly funny send-up of the genre that helped make her a star. In the new show she presides over a college where unlucky sorority girls are murdered by a masked killer—a gig she landed just when she thought her acting career was winding down. "I was just hanging out with my posse of menopause mamas," says Curtis, 56, who quips that she spent much of the last decade hawking a yogurt "that helps you poop." (The actress was a spokesperson for Activia.) She had reconciled herself to "going to book group and trying to stave off the reality of the Divine Miss M[enopause]" when she got a phone call from Scream Queens cocreator Ryan Murphy. "He offered me the role, and it sounded crazy and amazing. I left our meeting going, Wow."

'I'm comfortable stepping away from Hollywood when I need to'
—JAMIE LEE CURTIS

But when she learned the series would be shot in New Orleans, she balked. "I'm the mom," says Curtis, whose son Tom, 19, was starting his senior year of high school at the time. (Daughter Annie, 28, is a dance instructor.) "I texted Ryan and said, 'Mom can't go away for a year.'" He agreed to adapt to her schedule. Curtis now works "a very condensed" four days at a time so she can be back home in Los Angeles with her husband of 30 years, actor-director Christopher Guest, 67.

"The show wouldn't work without Jamie," says Scream Queens lead mean girl and sorority president Emma Roberts. "She's what inspired Murphy to do the show in the first place."

ROLL OF A LIFETIME
"I'm recognizable, sure," says Curtis, poking fun at her stint as an Activia spokesperson. "But I have a quiet life."

The youngest daughter of Hollywood legends Tony Curtis and Janet Leigh is a bit of a legacy herself when it comes to horror movies. Her mother, who died in 2004, is most famous for being stabbed to death in the iconic shower scene in Alfred Hitchcock's Psycho. But Curtis, who was raised by her mother and stepfather Robert Brandt after her parents divorced in 1962, says that when it comes to actually being frightened, she's "the least interested person on the planet" in thrills and chills: "Chris and I are watching Breaking Bad right now, and I sit there with a pillow over my face most of the time!"

Still, her big break as an actress came playing beleaguered babysitter Laurie Strode in arguably the most famous slasher movie of all time. Curtis was 19 and had dropped out of college; parts in other horror flicks followed. "No matter what I do, the lead line of my New York Times obit will mention Halloween," says the star, who found mainstream success in movies like Trading Places, True Lies and A Fish Called Wanda. After marrying Guest in 1984—he is descended from British aristocracy, so she assumed the title Lady Haden-Guest—she found success as a children's book author; her 11 books have sold more than five million copies. But unlike her famous father, who died in 2010, she's never embraced celebrity. "He used to walk into a restaurant and preen and pose," she says. "The public attention was very important; I don't need it." What she's not shy about is talking about aging and sexism in show business. In 2002, Curtis, then 43, posed in her underwear un-airbrushed for an article in More. "It's a very cruel business," she says of Hollywood. "It's humiliating to see the media frenzy that occurs when somebody gets older and they don't look the way they used to look. I want to make sure I leave on my own terms. I don't want to be punished for the natural evolution of the human being." But until then, she is loving her new job—and learning from the "young 'uns" on-set. "They've taught me about social media," she says of costars that include Roberts, Lea Michele and Billie Lourd. "I sit on-set and do needlepoint." And she leaves the screaming at the office. "I've been begging Jamie to watch Halloween with me," says Michele. "But she's so terrified. Maybe she'll indulge me." No thanks, says Curtis. "Life is scary enough!" ●

JIM CARREY

Tragic Loss, Private Anguish

AFTER THE APPARENT SUICIDE OF HIS GIRLFRIEND CATHRIONA WHITE, THE 'DEVASTATED' STAR STRUGGLES TO UNDERSTAND WHAT WENT WRONG

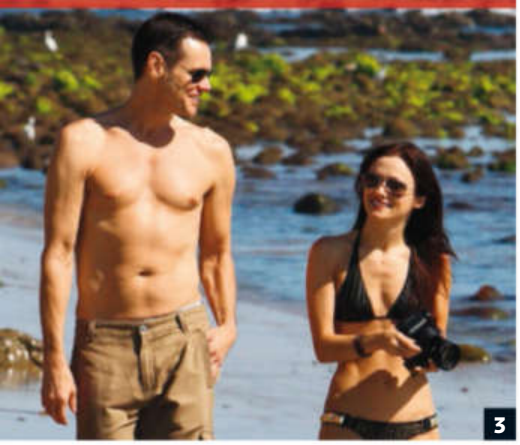

To celebrate her 30th birthday, Irish-born makeup artist Cathriona White and boyfriend Jim Carrey headed to one of their favorite spots on Sept. 19, Nobu in Malibu, for a sunset sushi dinner on the patio. "She was very bubbly, and they seemed to have a good time together," says a witness. "They seemed happy."

Just nine days later White was found dead in her Sherman Oaks, Calif., home of an apparent suicide, leaving her friends and family in shock—and Carrey, 53, who had dated her on and off for three years, "devastated," says a source in Carrey's circle. Painkillers, sleeping aids and other pills were found at White's bedside, along with several notes, including one addressed to Carrey. The pills had been taken from Carrey's home. "He wasn't actively using them and had no idea they were even missing," says a source. The star released a heartfelt statement: "She was a truly kind and delicate Irish flower, too sensitive for this soil,

1. "Cat was a very sweet and cheerful person," says friend Brie Childers. 2. She was found dead Sept. 28 at her Sherman Oaks home. 3. Carrey and White in 2012. "They loved spending time on the beach in Malibu," says a source.

to whom loving and being loved was all that sparkled." (White was still legally married to another man when she died, though a source says she was separated and planned to start divorce proceedings: "There is no way Jim would have dated her if she was in a relationship.")

In the days since her death, "Jim has been in shock and very upset," says another source close to the actor, adding that Carrey has met with White's sister and stepmother and helped pay for them to travel to L.A. "No one from her family is putting any blame on Jim," says the source. But Carrey "keeps questioning if he could have prevented it. Jim has been at home surrounded by people 24/7."

This is not the first time the star, famous for his goofy comedies, has dealt with trauma and turbulence in his personal life. He has been open about his own depression, which he has struggled with since he was a teenager. He has weathered ups and downs in his relationships, from his marriages to Melissa Womer and Lauren Holly to romances with Renée Zellweger and Jenny McCarthy. Carrey can be mercurial, sources say. "He likes being in a relationship but also likes to be alone with himself," says a source close to McCarthy. "He is charming and loving one day, then totally off on a soul-searching trek the next."

Carrey met White on a film set in 2012, but their relationship was on and off. They had recently "decided to take a breather," says a source, but they had not split and were still in contact. White, whom friends called Cat, was "very friendly and very sweet," says her friend Judd Weiss, "but at the same time very private and fairly shy." The Carrey source says White "had a sensitive personality and was doing a lot of soul searching," including, as she Instagrammed, taking a Scientology purification course. "Cathriona was very health-conscious," says a family friend from her Irish hometown, Cappawhite. "She did yoga and looked after herself. She didn't have mental problems as far as anyone is aware. Her family were hoping she might come home for Christmas." But in her last tweet on Sept. 24, the quiet beauty may have hinted at her inner anguish: "Signing off Twitter, I hope I have been a light to my nearest and dearest."

PATRICK KENNEDY

My Family's Dark Secrets

GROWING UP KENNEDY MEANT IGNORING ALCOHOLISM AND MENTAL ILLNESS CLOSE TO HOME. TED'S SON WANTS TO CHANGE THAT—AND SAVE LIVES

Growing up in a grand, gated home beside the Potomac River—just down the road from "Uncle Bobby's" Hickory Hill estate—Sen. Ted Kennedy's children Patrick, Ted Jr. and Kara knew something was very wrong. "My mother spent a lot of time in her bedroom drinking," Patrick recalls. "It was very painful for all of us." But no one spoke of it, just as they never aired any pain over their uncles' assassinations—first President John F. Kennedy, then Bobby. "The rest of America had family conversations about it, right? And yet we never talked about it," Patrick, 48, tells People. "It was family code."

That ends now. In his first book, A Common Struggle, the former Rhode Island congressman and youngest son of the late senator from Massachusetts opens up about his personal legacy of addiction and mental illness. He shares memories not just of his mother Joan's struggle with alcoholism and depression but also of what he describes as his father's post-traumatic stress disorder from his brothers' murders and a "drinking problem" so serious that, in 1991, Patrick and his siblings staged an intervention. "He took it the exact opposite way we had hoped," Patrick writes of his dad, who scolded them and then walked out. Patrick's stunningly unvarnished portrait of one of America's most private public

FAMILY TOGETHERNESS
1. Sailing days with his dad (in '79) were "magical times," Patrick says. 2. "Gramma" Rose's house was the hub for Patrick's family and his 26 cousins. 3. Cousins lost: David (left, in '80) and John F. Kennedy Jr., who died in a plane crash at age 38. 4. With Joan at Ted's Aug. 29, 2009, funeral, where Patrick, not yet sober, says he had to insist on being allowed to give a eulogy.

families is all part of his new mission: to accelerate brain research into these diseases through his One Mind initiative (onemind.org) and to lift the secrecy and shame of those who suffer. As he tells People, "Most families are frozen by the shame and hostage to the silence."

For Patrick, growing up in Camelot was as much about sailing and sing-a-longs around "Gramma" Rose's piano as it was about keeping up appearances. His dad took a "snap out of it" attitude toward depression and drinking: In Ted's eyes, Joan was weak. "I can still hear him: 'Here she goes again,'" Patrick writes. "I got the message early on: I didn't want people saying, 'Oh, we need to take care of Patrick,' the way they dismissed my mom."

By the time he was 18, Patrick had sunk deep into his own battle with depression, using cocaine and antianxiety drugs to get through high school. Teddy and Kara each did a stint in rehab, and in 1984 the family was rocked when cousin David, RFK's son, fatally overdosed at age 28—a tragedy Patrick now views as related to untreated PTSD. "David lost his father so violently and then, having to watch it all on television," Patrick says. "I don't think anybody understood that was a real injury that, if untreated, would kill him."

'We could never discuss it. Someone might overhear and we'd be exposed—as if we weren't exposed enough as it was'

Through it all, Patrick says, his dad—who stretched to be father figure to the 13 children JFK and RFK left behind—"went on in silent desperation for much of his life, self-medicating and unwittingly passing his unprocessed trauma on to my sister, brother and me." It's an inheritance Patrick is determined to spare his own children. After a 16-year career representing Rhode Island in Congress, Patrick left in 2011 to focus on sobriety and "save my life"; he has been sober since Feb. 22 of that year. With his wife, Amy, 36, a former schoolteacher, he's now raising his two children and stepdaughter (with a baby on the way) at the Jersey shore and worries about their genetic risk for mental illness and addiction. "They need to be as aware about that risk as they would if they were at high risk for cancer," he says.

Joan is in recovery, their connection is better than ever, and though she is physically frail, he says, she helped with the book. "Happy moments today are that I get to have her see me as a parent. She really loves being the grandmother," Patrick says. But dueling statements by Joan and Ted Jr. suggest dysfunction still runs deep. Through her friend Margo Nash Joan told People she knew nothing of the book and "did not assist [Patrick] in the project in any way." Ted Jr. said he is "heartbroken" by the book's "inaccurate and unfair portrayal of our family." (Kara died of a heart attack in 2011.) Patrick says he anticipated family "unease" about ending the secrecy: "We still have a ways to go, both in society and within my own family."

Before he died in 2009, Senator Kennedy gave Patrick Bobby Kennedy's book about union corruption, The Enemy Within. Inside, Patrick discovered an inscription from his uncle: To Teddy, who has his own enemy within. "Giving me that book was the closest my father ever came to acknowledging anything to me about his own struggles," Patrick writes. "The older I get, the more I see secrecy as 'the enemy within.'"

Under the Influence

I grew up in a household where both of my parents had mental health issues. My mother inherited her own mother's disabling alcoholism. And my father…well, I can now see my father suffered from PTSD [because of his brothers' murders] and because he denied himself treatment…he sometimes self-medicated. My dad was highly functional with his illnesses. My mom was just the opposite. She spent much of my childhood in her room, doing little but drinking and surviving, as her mother did before her. Occasionally she would come out and try her best to be attentive, like driving us somewhere. And when she swerved slowly down the street, my brother, sister, and I would just giggle because we didn't know what else to do. Sometimes she would disappear to go back to rehab, for weeks or months at a time. We didn't know much about it except for the obligatory family counseling session we had to go to. She did have a sustained period of wonderful sobriety during the late seventies and early eighties—during which I got to know a very different woman and mother than the one I grew up with, and we were able to travel together to the Holy Land, to London, and to Rome. But my mother spent too much of her life harshly impaired by the cycles of disease.

FAMILY MATTERS Joan (with Ted in '62) "had everyone gossiping about her when they should have been treating her," Patrick says.

THE FREE-SPIRITED GREAT-GRANDMA FINDS FAME (AND PURPOSE) ON INSTAGRAM

Helen Van Winkle hasn't always been known as Baddie Winkle, but the Instagram sensation insists she's been "funky" for 87 years. "I've always been stylish and outgoing," says Van Winkle, who started an account after a photo of her in her great-granddaughter Kennedy's cutoff shorts went viral in 2014 (Kennedy helps maintain her account). The daughter of a Kentucky coal miner, Van Winkle was born in 1928 and married her husband, Earl, when she was just 19. She worked as a factory clerk for 28 years before retiring at the age of 62. After Earl died, "I traveled around a bit," she says. Amassing 1.6 million Insta followers, becoming a celeb magnet and scoring a modeling contract came later. "I want to be a role model for senior citizens," says the grandmother of five and great-grandmother of three, who hopes to meet Drake. "I don't plan on slowing down until I . . . It’s just before 4 p.m. on a golden afternoon when the last of three school buses pulls up in front of Bob and Sue Quaid’s 4,700-sq.-ft. log house in remote Tooele, Utah. As a wheelchair ramp is lowered, Bob, 63, and Sue, 59, hurry outside to greet the final four of their 16 special-needs kids, who have been away all day at school. “You can’t tell me that these kids don’t understand us and know what love is," says Bob, a retired steel-company worker who suffered beatings with a bullwhip as a boy growing up in Idaho and promised himself that one day he would bring other children happiness. "I wanted to break that cycle of abuse," he says. "I wanted my kids to grow up with hugs and love."

After adopting their first special-needs child in 1990, the Quaids—who also have five biological children without special needs—couldn't say no when they heard of other "hard to adopt" kids needing a home. "We're going from the time our feet hit the ground in the morning until we drop into bed at night," says Sue, "but we wouldn't have it any other way. We're making our difference in our little corner of the world, and it feels wonderful to be able to do that." Social Security benefits for each child help pay the bills, and the Quaids have in-home nursing twice a day to help bathe the kids and give Sue and Bob some downtime. Not that they really need it. "I'm a happy man," says Bob. "Life is good. I love my kids. They've enriched my life in ways I never thought imaginable." ●

A WILL TO MAKE IT WORK
"Having a large family of kids who really needed someone was my destiny," says Bob, giving Kameron, who is blind and has cerebral palsy, a high-protein formula through his feeding tube. "Money is tight, but we go to yard sales for clothes and anything else we need. If it's not on sale, we don't get it."

FROM HELL TO HEAVEN
"I had a rough childhood—I want these kids to know love," says Bob (consulting with Sue about Calvin's medication). "I'm proud to give them a happy home."

MAKING TIME FOR LAUGHTER

THE TOUCHING STORY BEHIND FREEHELD

Fighting for Their Love

A DYING PLEA MADE THEM GAY-RIGHTS HEROES. NOW THEIR STORY HITS THE SCREEN

For Stacie Andree, walking the red carpet at the Toronto Film Festival premiere of Freeheld, the new movie based on her real-life love story, starring Ellen Page and Julianne Moore, was a surreal—and bittersweet—moment. "It was an out-of-body experience," she says of watching Moore portray her late domestic partner, Laurel Hester. "The detail that Julianne took into becoming Laurel was amazing for me to see." But the shy, reserved auto mechanic from New Jersey also found it hard to watch the most devastating moments of her life on the big screen. "When I first met Stacie, she said something that shattered me," Page, who plays Andree in the film, tells People. "She said, 'It's cool that you're here, and it's nice to meet you and stuff, but it's really hard for me, because the movie wouldn't have been made if Laurel hadn't died.'"

'The fact that Laurel held on to the fight might be what kept her here longer' —STACIE ANDREE

Neither Hester, a 23-year New Jersey police veteran when she died of lung cancer at age 49, nor Andree, who was 18 years her junior, ever imagined seeing themselves as Hollywood heroines—or as key players in the gay civil-rights battle. But the couple found themselves at the forefront of the fight when Hester learned of her cancer in 2004. Told that her pension benefits would not pass on to Andree—only straight married couples were eligible—she appealed to county authorities (called "freeholders" in New Jersey). In 2006, three weeks after a heartbreaking plea from her hospital bed led officials to extend benefits to domestic partners, Hester died. "The fight gave her extra drive," says Andree, who appeared with Hester in a 2007 Oscar-winning documentary by Cynthia Wade that inspired the new film. "People's rights is what she stood for."

But at the heart of a crusade that would make national news was a very personal love story that unspooled in the most ordinary of ways: over coffee-shop dates, late-night conversations and bar nights with friends. "She just had that energy that made you feel good, and you wanted to get to know her and be with her," says Andree, 40. Their age gap "didn't really make a difference," she says. "We both adjusted to it."

"Stacie has this pure heart," says Page (photographed by People with Andree in Toronto Sept. 13).

When Hester got sick—she thought the pain in her side "was a pulled muscle from going to the gym," recalls Andree—their world crumbled. "Our life was pretty much the two of us," she says. Accompanying Hester to the hospital for her biopsy, "I was really regretting being there by myself," says Andree. "I remember the doctor coming out and saying the cancer was all over. It was the worst news possible."

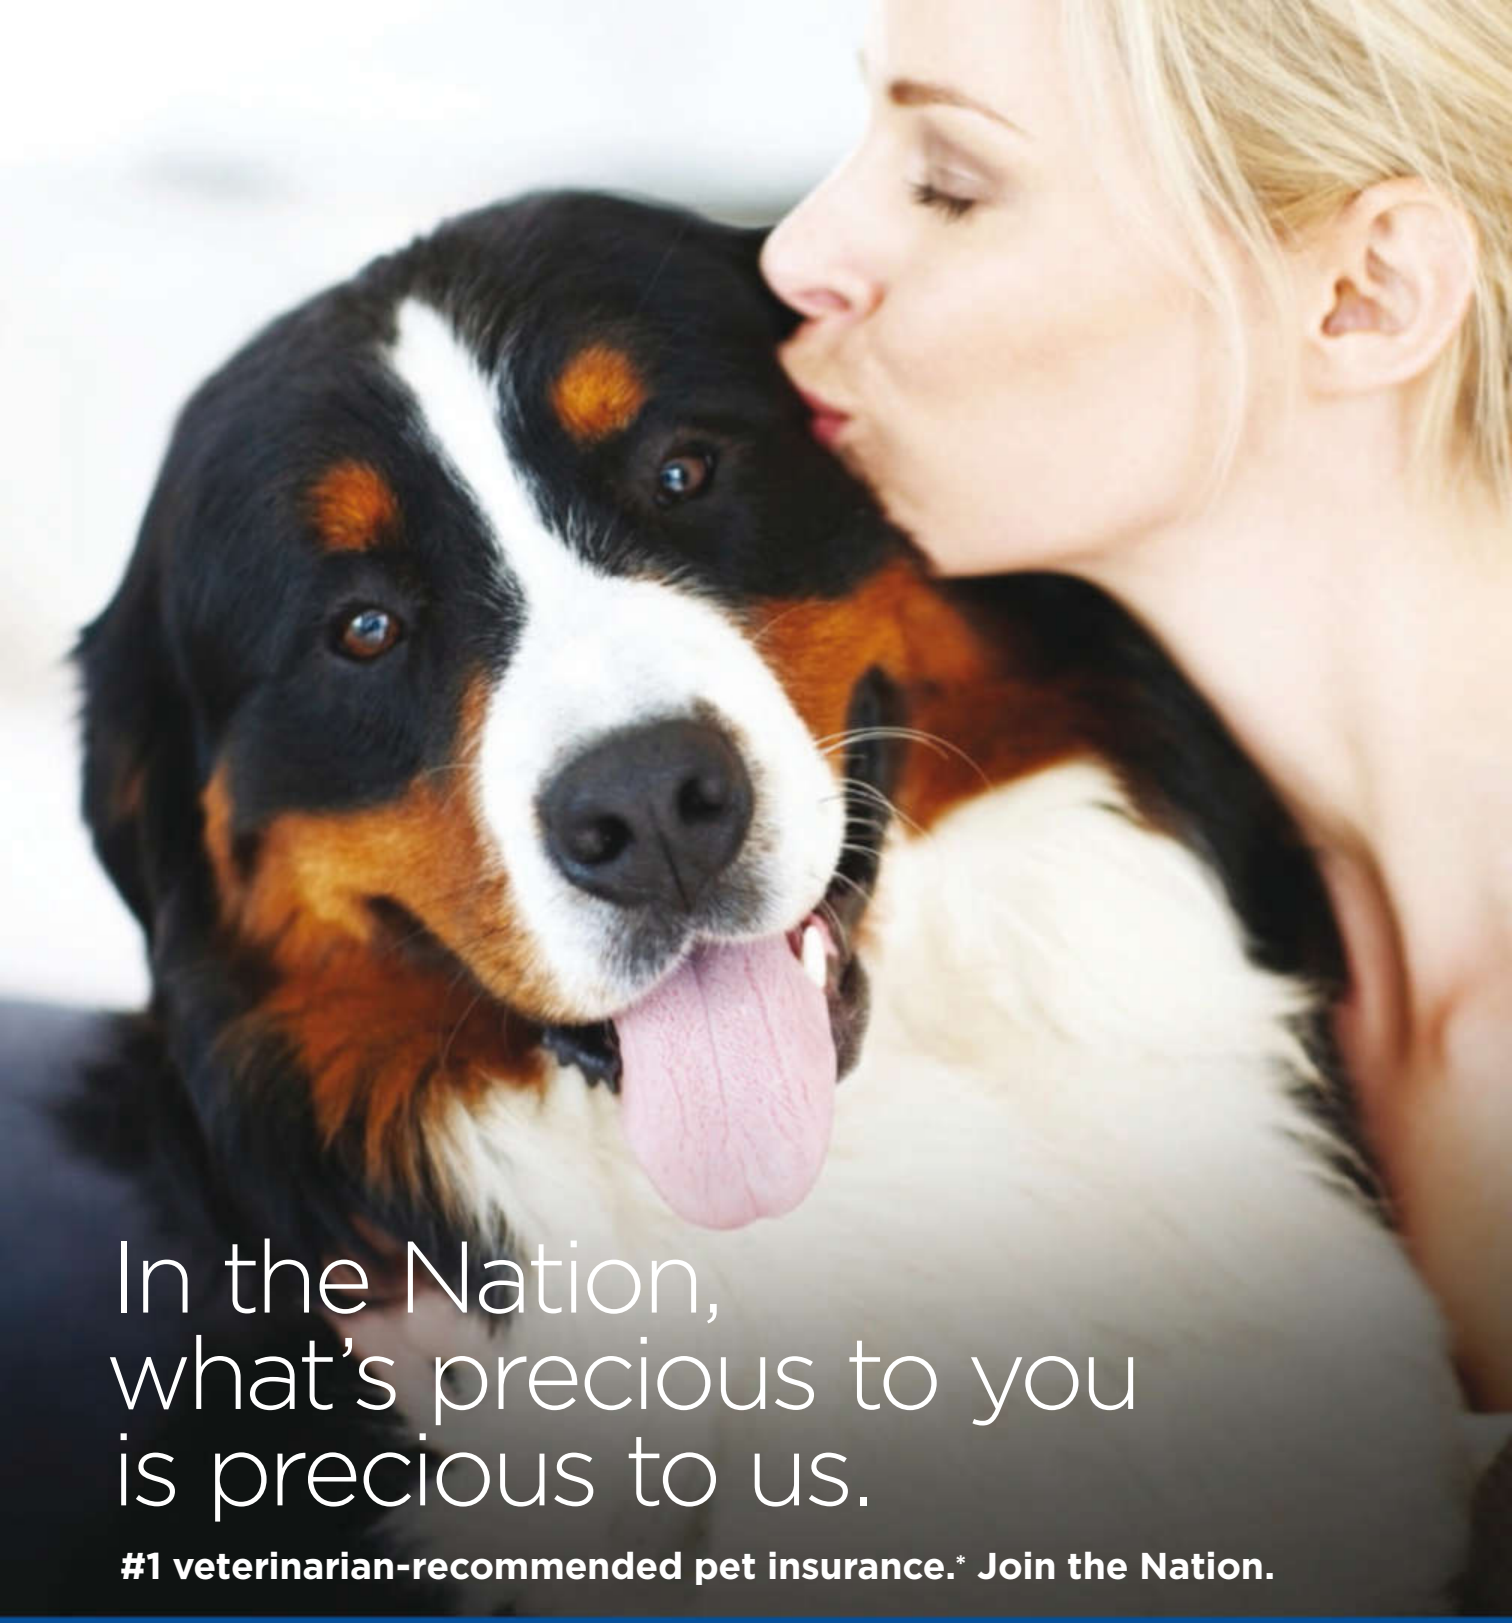

She leaned heavily on Dane Wells, Hester's bighearted partner on the police force. "He always called to see how Laurel was doing, so we became phone pals," says Andree. Says Wells: "As the political battle began to brew, we would talk every day. We became best friends." Andree still lives in the Point Pleasant, N.J., home she shared and renovated with Hester—and which she would have had to leave without the financial support of Hester's pension.

Although she applauds Page's performance (the actress says making the movie inspired her to come out as lesbian last year), Andree says the film is hard for her to watch. "Toward the end, when Ellen crawls into bed with Julianne, that was me," says Andree. Looking back on Hester's fight, "I'm so glad everybody else can benefit from it," she says, "but at the time, I couldn't care less. I just wanted to be with Laurel." Andree is now in a relationship. But "it's challenging, because with Laurel, it's not like a breakup," she adds. "I've always loved Laurel. And I always will."

LEALA

New South Wales, Australia

Helped save a 2½-year-old from drowning

When David Kenney saw his soaking-wet 10-year-old Staffordshire bull terrier sprinting toward him in September, he knew something was wrong. "Leala led him straight down to the dam, and he found Alexander floating facedown," says Kenney's partner, Lisa Brockbank, of their 2½-year-old son. "He was completely unconscious, so they did CPR until the ambulance got there." Though doctors warned Brockbank that her son might not make it out of the hospital, Alexander made a full recovery with Leala by his side. Says Brockbank, 39: "If it wasn't for our dog, we wouldn't have our son here today."

COURAGEOUS CANINES

MAX | Weatherford, Texas

Served four tours of duty as an improvised-explosive-device detector with the U.S. Marines—saving thousands of lives

While working as a bomb-sniffing dog in Iraq and Afghanistan through four grueling tours, the 8-year-old Labrador mix helped keep Marine Capt. Jeffrey Park—and countless of his men—safe. "Max could always get Jeff in and out of minefields safely to save his men's lives," says Jeffrey's father, John Park. Even before Max suffered a heat stroke in 2011 and was forced into retirement, Jeffrey knew it was time to return the favor. "Jeff said, 'I'll adopt him. He saved my life; I'll save his,'" says John, who is watching over the pooch now while his son finishes his latest tour in Japan. Now that Max has settled into civilian life, "he's adapted to the family so well. He's such a sweet dog."

BEAR | Anderson, Ind.

The July child-pornography arrest of former Subway spokesman Jared Fogle came thanks in part to this 2-year-old black Labrador, who detected a data device in Fogle's Indiana home that investigators had missed. (The so-called porn-sniffing dog can actually smell chemicals in some electronic devices.) "Those micro SD cards hold thousands of pictures, and each picture is a potential victim," says Bear's former trainer Todd Jordan (above), 48. Bear now works for the Seattle Police Department.

GLORY | Los Angeles

Since 2007, this 8-year-old certified search-and-rescue bloodhound has used her acute sense of smell to track down lost animals—hundreds so far—for distraught owners. "She never gives up," says handler Landa Coldiron, 50. "I think she knows it's important."

LUCAS | Hancock County, Miss.

When deputy Todd Frazier was attacked on the job by three men, his K9 partner, a 6-year-old Belgian Malinois, fought them off. Lucas tore his ACL but has since made a full recovery.

RUBY
San Jose, Calif.

Lost an eye while saving her homeless owner from a machete attack

The American bulldog mix bravely defended her homeless owner from a machete-wielding man in April—losing her left eye in the process. The loyal 2-year-old ended up at a shelter, and the Silicon Valley Pet Project stepped in to find her a forever home. "Ruby had a rough start in life," says new owner Andrea Lee, 49 (below right). "But because the shelter and rescue group did not give up on her, our family has been blessed with a wonderful companion."

LIFE SAVERS

"We need Ruby as much as she needs us," says Lee (with daughter Haven).

Wrangler with Shelby (left) and the Springboro Fire Department.

WRANGLER | Albion, Pa.

Jennifer Stoneman describes her 8-year-old basset hound as a "wimp," but his anxiety and apprehension about noise are what saved her family from a house fire. "He was jumping on my husband at 3 o'clock in the morning, and that's when we heard the rumbling in the attic," she says of the electrical blaze that started from old wiring. "I'm not sure if he thought it was thunder, but he was definitely nervous." Stoneman, 37, was able to wake up her 15-year-old daughter Shelby, and the family escaped with only a few minor burns, but "if it weren't for him, it could have been a totally different outcome," she says. "He'll always have a place at the dinner table, because he is our hero."

BENJI | Stockton, Calif.

A 250-lb. bear was no match for this 10-lb. Yorkie. The 6-year-old pup barked and nipped at the bear from behind when it was attacking his owner Larry Yepez, 67, in August. "Benji gave me just enough time to get back on my feet and get us back in the house," says Yepez, a Vietnam veteran, who suffered injuries to his arm, neck and abdomen. "I'm positive I would have died without him."

VADER Newbury, Mass.

Patrick Mulligan (center) suffered a leg cramp while swimming in the ocean last August as his sons Ryan, 12, and Lucas, 9, waited onshore. Luckily, his 22-month-old English black Lab—who was wearing a life jacket with a handle—was able to tow his owner back to safety. "He got a big steak bone that night," says Mulligan, 54.

LIFE SAVERS

EMBER | Monroe, Ohio

When 10-year-old Tre Daniels was having a seizure in the bathroom in May, the 19-month-old pit bull alerted the family to his medical emergency. "She sat next to our bed and made this low grumble — then took off down the hall," says Tracy Daniels, 33, whose son was later diagnosed with epilepsy. "When we got home from the hospital, Ember lay at his feet the entire day. They are buddies."

GEORGE | Tuscumbia, Ala.

After finding this abandoned stray in July, Martha Kimbrough, 58, tried to find him a new home. (She had her hands full with her existing dogs.) But George soon earned his keep. "I was watering my flowers one evening, and he just started barking hysterically," she recalls. "I looked over and there was a rattlesnake! I could have been bit." Now "he's got his little home here forever," she says. "He's a really brave dog."

HUGO
Davenport, Iowa

Helped his teenage owner both on and off the cross-country track!

Tyler Gerdts's service dog helps with his anxiety and is trained to track the 17-year-old—who has autism and a brain injury—if he wanders off. But it doesn't stop there: The 22-month-old German shepherd is also Tyler's running partner. "We run as a team, like we are one person," says the high school junior, who, earlier this year, became the first high school cross-country runner in Iowa to compete with a service dog. Tyler's mom, Kelley, says Hugo has also helped Tyler socialize. "Tyler struggles to show empathy to people, but we see it come out naturally with Hugo," she says. "He has brought so much joy to our lives."

"Hugo running with me makes me feel like a winner," says Tyler (with Hugo at a race in August).

AXEL | Fredericksburg, Va.

"I was on the brink of death, and he has turned my life around," says Marine Capt. Jason Haag of his 4-year-old service German shepherd. After serving two tours in Iraq and one in Afghanistan—during which he was shot and injured by an improvised explosive device—Haag, 35, was diagnosed with a traumatic brain injury and post-traumatic stress disorder. "I cut myself off from everybody, and I was stuck in my basement for a very long time," says the father of three. Relief came in 2012 when his neighbor introduced him to K9s for Warriors. Through this service-canine program, Haag was paired with Axel, who was two days away from being euthanized if no home could be found. "He wakes me up from nightmares, he pulls me out of anxiety attacks," says Haag. "We're dependent on each other. He saved my life, and I think he knows I saved his as well."

Tillie, a 12-year-old setter mix, loyally stood guard over her "sister" Phoebe, a 4-year-old basset hound who had fallen into an old concrete cistern. The pair were missing for a week before being found. "Even when I got there she would not leave her friend's side," says Amy Carey, a volunteer at Vashon Island Pet Protectors. Phoebe, though tired and hungry, was declared fine and both dogs were reunited with their owner.

KALA & KEIRA
Alpharetta, Ga.
A shelter photo of two hugging pups (below) went viral after Angels Among Us Pet Rescue saved the pair from a scheduled euthanization. Now in foster care, "they still hug often," says the group's spokeswoman Anne Clarke of the 10-month-old hound mix and 13-month-old boxer mix. "We are trying to find them a home together. They are ready!"

Chili Barbecue Ribs

THE EXECUTIVE PITMASTER AT HILL COUNTRY BARBECUE MARKET WILL SERVE THIS SPICY DISH AT THE NEW YORK CITY WINE & FOOD FESTIVAL

- 1 tsp. cayenne
- 2 tsp. red pepper flakes
- 1 tbsp. onion powder
- 2 tbsp. garlic powder
- 1 tbsp. smoked paprika
- 5 tbsp. ground black pepper
- ¾ cup kosher salt
- 2 tbsp. ancho chili powder
- ½ cup chipotle powder
- 1 tsp. ground coriander
- 1 tsp. ground cumin
- 2 4-lb. racks of beef ribs

1. Preheat the oven to 275°. Combine all the dry ingredients in a large bowl and mix well. Rub the ribs liberally with half the spice rub, coating all the sides well. (Save the remaining rub to season steaks, burgers or pork.)

2. Place the ribs on a rack in a roasting pan, and cook uncovered for approximately 3 to 3½ hours. The ribs should have a nice outer crust but be tender inside. Remove from oven and slice into portions.

Serves: 4 to 6
Prep time: 10 minutes
Cook time: 3 hours 30 minutes

Tomato & Basil Halibut

THE ACTOR WORKED WITH CHEF CONSULTANT MARCUS WAREING TO PREPARE THIS DISH IN HIS UPCOMING MOVIE BURNT, IN THEATERS OCT. 23

- 4 plum tomatoes, quartered
- ¼ cup plus 2 tbsp. extra-virgin olive oil, divided
- Kosher salt
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 2 sprigs thyme, leaves picked
- 3 cups basil, loosely packed
- ¼ cup Greek yogurt
- 1 tsp. honey
- 2 tbsp. vegetable oil
- 2 tbsp. unsalted butter
- 2 (6-oz.) halibut fillets

1. To prepare the tomatoes, preheat the oven to 215°. Place the tomatoes, skin-side down, on a baking sheet and drizzle with 2 tbsp. olive oil. Sprinkle with ½ tsp. salt, ½ tsp. pepper and thyme, and bake for 2 to 3 hours until the tomato juices have mostly evaporated. Set aside.

2. To make the sauce, combine basil leaves, ¼ cup olive oil and 1 tsp. salt in a food processor and blend until smooth. Mix in yogurt and honey. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

3. Heat vegetable oil and butter in a nonstick pan over medium-high heat. Season halibut on both sides with salt and pepper. When the oil is hot, cook fillets for 4 to 5 minutes on each side, until golden brown and cooked through. Remove from heat and let rest for 2 minutes.

4. Serve the halibut with the reserved tomatoes, a drizzle of olive oil and a dollop of yogurt-basil sauce.

Serves: 2
Prep time: 20 minutes
Cook time: 2 hours 45 minutes

Recipe adapted from Marcus Wareing Restaurants.

Q&A

U.K. CHEF MARCUS WAREING TAKES US BEHIND THE SCENES OF THE CULINARY FLICK

What was your involvement in Burnt?
My team wrote all the recipes and menus and made sure it represented the way a chef and a kitchen would have really worked.

How did Bradley do as a chef?
He'd watch me dress a plate and copy it almost identically. I'd stand back and think, "It's taken me all my life to get here and you just do it straight-away!" He's very good.

Can we expect a lot of food porn?
It's not food porn, no. But I think Bradley will inspire young people to want to become chefs and work in this amazing industry.

ARIANA GRANDE'S BEAUTY MANTRA:

Express Yourself!

THE POP STAR HAS A FRAGRANCE THAT SMELLS LIKE MARSHMALLOW AND A MASCARA OBSESSION. WHAT'S NOT TO LOVE?

Grande with her brother Frankie.

Her debut scent is almost sweet enough to eat . . . My favorite note in the fragrance is marshmallow. It's so good! I don't eat them often, though, because I'm vegan, and the vegan ones are not as tasty as the regular ones I ate when I was younger.

. . . and ladies aren't the only ones spritzing it on. My brother [Frankie] wears it. It's for everyone.

She's a bit of a shopaholic. I love snuggling up in bed and watching Orange Is the New Black [while] being on macys.com or saksfifthavenue.com. But I also love going to stores. That's more dangerous, though, because I will buy everything and use nothing.

But she's much more strict about her skin regimen. I'm skin care obsessed, but at the same time I have a really busy schedule, so I use things that are quick and convenient. I take my makeup off with Burt's Bees wipes.

Consider concealer her makeup BFF. I don't sleep much, so I need concealer in my life every day. I use Kevyn Aucoin.

She likes an insane amount of mascara on her lashes. I'm a big fan of mascara, to the point where my makeup artist Daniel Chinchilla will be like, "enough!" I have 75 [tubes]—kidding! I have a bunch, but I love M.A.C.

Her manis are a tad high maintenance. I'm always so fidgety [during a manicure], you don't want to do my nails. I'm like, "Hold on, give me my right hand for one more second!"

Her spirit animal is pretty adorable. It's a seahorse because they're so little and cute, and because I love water.

You'll want to live by her beauty philosophy. We're all different, so I think, "Do whatever the hell you want!" Everyone should be able to express themselves with hair, makeup, fashion, art, music, and it should all be accepted—and celebrated.

Meet the Twins from Grandfathered

AT JUST 2 YEARS OLD, EMELIA AND LAYLA GOLFIERI ARE ALREADY STEALING THE SCENE IN THEIR SITCOM DEBUT

IDENTICAL TWINS Layla and Emelia Golfieri were discovered by a talent manager during a routine trip to the grocery store and landed their first print ad at 6 months old. Now the 2-year-old girls share the role of Edie, acting alongside John Stamos and Josh Peck in FOX's new comedy Grandfathered. "Six weeks ago they were just saying a few words, but now they are having full conversations with the cameramen," says mom Nicole, 31, co-owner of an L.A.-based consulting firm, who, along with her husband, Valter, 42, a yacht captain and dock master, is proud to see the twins evolve on-set. "And John is so attentive to the girls and truly engages with them." In fact Stamos, who plays their grandfather, solidified the bond early on during taping. "In the pilot episode there was one scene where they screamed and bawled the entire time," says Stamos. "I whispered to them if they stop crying, I'll make them as famous and rich as the last twins I worked with. They stopped crying immediately! I feel like I'm a baby whisperer now."—MARIAH HAAS

THE ACTOR, 59, AND HIS PARTNER, DEVLIN ELLIOTT, GIVE VOICE TO THEIR DOG IN THE NEW CHILDREN'S BOOK NAUGHTY MABEL

Last time I was recognized
Probably at the mall. The really nice people always say, "I don't mean to bother you…" but occasionally you run into someone who seems slightly hostile. "Hey, you! I know you!" It's like you were shoplifting or something.

Last time I cried
I came to L.A. for work in July, and it's hard to be away from home and my partner and our dog Mabel. He sent me a little video of her running around our backyard on Long Island and saying hello to me, and that got me.

Last time I was frustrated
I get frustrated watching the news and at some of the people running for President. When I see some of them, it's frustrating when you think, "Is this the best we can do?!"

Last time I was impressed
What? Oh, I thought you said the last time you had sex! I was going to have to get out a calendar. Let's see, I'm working with Sarah Paulson on American Crime Story, and she impresses me. I think people would be surprised by how funny she is.

Last time I danced
Well, if you want to call it that, I danced in The Addams Family [on Broadway]. I don't like to dance. You want a happy dance? You should call Steve Martin. I do the Manic-Depressive Frug; that's about it.
